CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

I continue to the community the justly celebrated remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs, it is unnecessary to trifle with the lives or health of the afflicted, but frankly to lay before them the ingredients of these medicines, and some of the evidence of its success, from which they can judge for themselves. The Cherry Pectoral is composed of Balsamic Gums, which soothe and heal the membranes of the throat and lungs, when inflamed and ulcerated, and some of the most active vegetable remedies known, which act powerfully upon the blood, and through it upon the diseased organs, but entirely expel disease, and restore health and vigor.

From the distinguished Professor of Chemistry and Materia Medica, Bowdoin College.

Dear Sir: I delayed answering the receipt of your letter, in the hope that I could say of witness a case of Throat Disease in my own family, or in one of the families of my friends, that I have not done full justice to the remedy. I have now done so, and feel a high degree of satisfaction in saying that I have found it in several cases both of children and adults, under circumstances which would seem to preclude any hope of relief, a most valuable remedy for Throat Diseases.

Yours, truly, PARKER CLEAVELAND, M. D.

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 5, 1841.

LOWELL, Aug. 30, 1842.

DR. J. C. AYER: I have been cured of the worst cough I ever had in my family, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and have full confidence in its virtues. I have opportunity of recommending it to others, and shall do so.

Yours respectfully, D. D. EMERSON.

☞ Read the following, and see if this medicine is worth a trial. This patient has become very ill, and the effect of the medicine was remarkable:

UNITED STATES HOTEL, Corner of Nassau & Fulton Sts., N. Y., Jan. 5, 1849.

DR. J. C. AYER,—Sir: I have suffered with a pain and oppression of the lungs, and all the symptoms of a confirmed consumption, for more than a year, and could find no medicine that would relieve me, until I commenced the use of your CHERRY PECTORAL, which gave me great relief, and I have been steadily improving ever since. My strength is full, my health is well, my appetite good.

While writing your medicine, I had the satisfaction of curing one of the severest colds, Mr. Hoffman, the gentleman who has been superintending the purchase of cattle, &c., for this house, has used your PECTORAL with the most perfect success. You are at liberty to refer to me, if you think proper.

Yours, &c., J. F. CALHOUN, of South Carolina.

Sewing by Machinery.

To Journeymen Tailors, Seamstresses, Employers, and all others interested in Sewing of any description.

SEVERAL examples have been placed in the Machines for Sewing, but they were with out many objections, and could be sent to families or private individuals.

SINGER & PHELPS' Boston Sewing Machines, invented by Isaac M. Singer, and manufactured by Singer & Phelps, No. 79 Harvard Place, Boston, Mass., is offered to the public as a perfect machine, and will be constructed and adapted to perform any kind of work from the finest muslin to the thickest cloth, and will do as much as well as any description of sewing by hand, and in a much less time. The seam is straight, and works perpendicularly upon the table of the machine, affording room and opportunity to adjust the fabric in any way—the stitch can be regulated to any length, even to the finest thread.

The silk made by this machine is the strongest that will not rot, and is the only machine silk that can be depended upon. Any person can learn to operate upon it in one hour.

The price of these machines, which are warranted to run two years without repairs, will be from $100 to $150, and they are simple in their construction, and so easily explained and managed, that any person of ordinary ability may operate it.

The price of those machines, which are worked by a treadle, and capable of sewing from 1500 to 2000 stitches per minute, is from $150 to $200, according to the size of the machine, and the number of needles. Shuttles, Hemmers, Braiders, Tucking Guides, Gathering Machine, Feeding Apparatus, Oil and Cloths, Thread, Silk, Twist, Needles, Screw Drivers, and other Machine Tools, and Cloth Cutting Machine, for sale at the factory, with correspondence, upon trial, with the recommendations given.

The profit arising from the use of one of these machines, which sews with either one or two needles from five to six dollars per day. The operation is not confined to the manufacture of clothing only, but may be applied to sewing every description of cloth, carpeting, leather, and many kinds of metal, or wire.

This machine, with ordinary care, is warranted to run two years without repairs, and will last many years. And it is so simple in its construction, and so easily explained and managed, that any person of ordinary ability may operate it.

The price of these

by Imperial appointment, but at the time the application was made Chief of the Revolutionary Government. The object of this application was to obtain the good offices of Mr. Stiles with the Imperial Government, with a view to the suspension of hostilities.—This application became the subject of a conference between Prince Schwarzenberg, the Imperial Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Stiles.

The Prince commanded the considerateness and propriety with which Mr. Stiles had acted, and, so far from disapproving his interference advised him, in case he received a further communication from the Revolutionary Government in Hungary, to have an interview with the Emperor with the proceedings determined on in relation to that kingdom. A week after these occurrences, Mr. Stiles received, through a secret channel, a communication signed by L. Kossuth, President of the Committee of Defence, and countersigned by Francis Pulszky, Secretary of State.

On the, receipt of this communication, Mr. Stiles had an interview with Prince Windisgrätz, who received him with the utmost kindness, and thanked him for his efforts toward reconciling the existing difficulties. Such were the incidents which first drew the attention of the Government of the United States particularly to the affairs of Hungary, and the conduct of Mr. Stiles, though acting without instructions in a matter of such delicacy, having been viewed with much satisfaction by the Imperial Government, was approved by that of the United States.

In the course of the year 1848, and in the early part of the year 1849, a considerable number of Hungarians came to the United States. Among them were individuals representing themselves to be in the confidence of the Revolutionary Government; and by these persons the President was strongly urged to recognise the existence of that Government. In these applications, and in the manner in which they were viewed by the President, there was nothing unusual; still less was there anything unauthorised by the law of nations. It is the right of every independent State to enter into friendly relations with every other independent State.

Of course questions of prudence naturally arise in reference to new States, brought by successful revolutions into the family of nations, but it is not to be required of neutral Powers that they should await the recognition of the new Government by the parent State. No principle of public law has become more frequently acted upon within the last thirty years by the great Powers of the world than this. Within that period eight or ten new States have established independent Governments within the limits of the colonial dominions of Spain, on this continent; and in Europe, the same thing has been done by Belgium and Greece. The existence of all these Governments was recognized by some of the leading Powers of Europe, as well as by the United States, before it was acknowledged by the States from which they have separated themselves.

If, therefore, the United States had gone so far as formally to acknowledge the independence of Hungary, although, as the result has proved, it would have been a precipitate step, and one from which no benefit would have resulted to either party, it would not, nevertheless, have been an act against the law of nations, provided they took no part in the contest with Austria. But the United States did no such thing. Not only did they not yield to Hungary any actual countenance or succor; not only did they not show their ships of war in the Adriatic with any menacing or hostile aspect, but they studiously abstained from everything which had not been done in other cases in times past, and contented themselves with instituting an inquiry into the truth and reality of alleged political occurrences.

Mr. Hulsemann incorrectly, I think, unintentionally certainly, the nature of the mission of this agent, when he says that "a United States agent had been despatched to Vienna with orders to watch a favorable moment to recognise the Hungarian republic, and to conclude a treaty of commerce with the same." This, indeed, would have been a fruitful object, but Mr. Mann's errand was, in the first instance, purely one of inquiry. He had no power to act, unless he had first come to the conviction that a firm and stable Hungarian Government existed. The principal object the President has, in view, according to his instructions, is to obtain minute and reliable information in regard to Hungary in connection with the affairs of adjoining countries, the probable issue of the present revolutionary movements, and the chances we may have of forming commercial arrangements with that Power favorable to the United States.

Again, in the same paper, it is said: "The object of the President is to obtain information in regard to Hungary and her resources and prospects, with a view to an early recognition of her independence and the formation of commercial relations with her." It was only in the event that the New Government should appear, in the opinion of the agent, to be firm and stable, that the President proposed to recommend its recognition.

Mr. Hulsemann, in qualifying these steps of President Taylor with the epithet of 'hostile,' seems to take for granted that the inquiry could, in the expectation of the President, have but one result, and that favorable to Hungary. If this were so it would not change the case. But the American Government sought for nothing but truth; it desired to learn the facts through a reliable channel. It so happened in the chances and vicissitudes of human affairs that the result was adverse to the Hungarian revolution. The American agent—as was stated in his instructions to be not unlikely—found the condition of Hungarian affairs less prosperous than it had been, or had been believed to be. He did not enter Hungary, nor hold any direct communication with her revolutionary leaders. He reported against the recognition of her independence. Conscious he found that she had been unable to secure a firm and stable government. He carefully forbore, as his instructions required, to give publicity to his mission, and the undersigned supposes that the Austrian Government first learned its existence from the communication of the President to the Senate.

Mr. Hulsemann will observe from this statement that Mr. Mann's mission was wholly unobjectionable, and strictly within the rule of the laws of nations, and the duty of the United States as a neutral Power. He will accordingly feel how little foundation there is for his remark, that 'those who did not hesitate to assume the responsibility of sending Mr. Dudley Mann on such an errand, should, independent of considerations of propriety, have borne in mind that they were exposing their emissary to be treated as a spy.' A spy is a person sent by one belligerent to gain secret information of the forces and defences of the other, to be used for hostile purposes. According to practice, he may use deception, under the penalty of being lawfully hanged if detected.

To give this odious name and character to a confidential agent of a neutral Power, bearing the commission of his country, and sent for a purpose fully warranted by the law of nations, is not only to abuse language, but also to confound all just ideas, and to announce the wildest and most extravagant notions, such as certainly were not to have been expected in a grave diplomatic paper; and the President directs the undersigned to say to Mr. Hulsemann that the American Government would regard such an imputation upon it by the Cabinet of Austria, as that it employs spies, and that in a quarrel none of its own, as distinctly offensive, it did not presume, as it is willing to presume, that the word used in the original German was not of equivalent meaning with 'spy' in the English language, or that in some other way the employment of such an opprobious term may be explained. Had the Imperial Government of Austria subjected Mr. Mann to the treatment of a spy, it would have placed itself without the pale of civilized nations; and the Cabinet of Vienna may be assured, that if it had ever attempted to carry any such purpose into effect, in the case of an authorized agent of this Government, the spirit of this country would have demanded immediate hostilities to be waged by the united power of the Republic, naval.

Mr. Hulsemann proceeds to remark that this is a merely painful incident, therefore might be passed over without any written evidence left on our part in the archives of the United States, had not Gen. Taylor, in closing his message to the Senate, in his message of the 13th of last March, the instructions with which Mr. Mann had been furnished on the day of his mission to Vienna. The publication which has been given to that document, and the Imperial Government, under the necessity of entering a formal protest, by official representative, against the proceeding of the American Government, lest that Government should construe our silence into a tacit approbation of the principles and conduct of the insurgents, appear to have guided its action and to have dictated its resolve.

The undersigned is reluctant to assert to Mr. Hulsemann, that the Cabinet of Vienna, and all the civilized world, that the steps taken by the President, now protested against by the Austrian Government, were warranted by the law of nations, and according to the usages of civilized States. With respect to the communication of Mr. Mann's instructions to the Secretary of State, the language in which they are couched has already been said, and Mr. Hulsemann will perceive the justice of the remark, that those are domestic affairs, in reference to which the Government of this United States cannot admit the slightest responsibility to the Government of his Imperial Majesty. No State, disavowing the appellation of independent, can permit the language in which it may instruct its own officers in the discharge of their duties to itself to be called in question under any pretext by a foreign Power.

But, even if this were not so, Mr. Hulsemann is in error in stating that the Austrian Government is called an 'Iron Rule' in Mr. Mann's instructions. That phrase is not found in that paper, and in respect to the only epithet bestowed in Mr. Mann's instructions on the late Chief of the Revolutionary Government of Hungary, Mr. Hulsemann will bear in mind that this Government of the United States cannot justly be suspected, in a confidential communication to its own agent, of withholding from him information in respect of distinction of which a great part of the world thinks him worthy, merely on the ground that his own Government regards him as a rebel. At the early stage of the American Revolution, when Washington was considered by the English Government as a rebel chief, he was regarded by the Continent of Europe as a gallant and noble hero. But the undersigned will take the liberty of bringing the Cabinet of Vienna into the presence of its own predecessors, and of citing for its consideration the conduct of the Imperial Government itself. In the year 1777, the war of the American Revolution was raging all over these United States; England was prosecuting that war with almost resistless determination, and by the exertion of all her military means to the fullest extent.

Germany was at that time at peace with England, and yet an agent of that Congress which was looked upon by England as no other right than that of a body in open rebellion, was not only received with great respect by the Ambassador of the Empress Queen at Paris, and by the Minister of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, who afterwards mounted the imperial throne, but resided in Vienna for a considerable time, not, indeed, officially acknowledged, but treated with courtesy and respect; and the Emperor suffered himself to be persuaded by that agent to exert himself to prevent the German Powers from furnishing troops to England to enable her to suppress the rebellion in America. Neither Mr. Hulsemann, nor the Cabinet of Vienna, it is presumed, will undertake to say that anything said or done by this Government in regard to the recent war between Austria and Hungary is not borne out, and much more than borne out, by the example of the Imperial Court. It is believed that the Emperor Joseph the Second habitually spoke in terms of respect and admiration of the character of Washington, as he is known to have done of that of Franklin; and he declined, at the invitation of Frederick, to inform himself of the progress of the Revolutionary struggle in America, nor to express his deep sense of the merits and the talents of those illustrious men who were then leading their country to independence and renown. The undersigned may add, that in 1781, the Courts of Russia and Austria proposed a diplomatic Congress of the belligerent Powers, to which the Commissioners of the United States should be admitted.

Mr. Hulsemann thinks that in Mr. Mann's instructions improper expressions are introduced in regard to Russia; but the undersigned has no reason to suppose that Russia herself is of that opinion. The only observation made in those instructions about Russia is, that she has chosen to assume an attitude of interference, and her immense preparations for invading and reducing the Hungarians to the rule of Austria—a fact which they desire to be expressed—gave so serious a character to the conquest as to awaken the most painful solicitude in the minds of Americans.

The undersigned cannot but consider the Austrian Cabinet as unnecessarily susceptible of looking upon language like this as a "hostile demonstration." It will remember that it was addressed by the Government to its own agent, and has received publicity only through a communication from one agent of the American Government to another. The language quoted must have seemed moderate and inoffensive. The sensibility of nations would surely forbid its being addressed to the two Imperial Powers themselves. It is scarcely necessary for the undersigned to say that the relations of the United States with Russia have always been of the most friendly kind, and have never been deemed by either party to require any compromise of their peculiar views, or abandonment of domestic or foreign policy, or the true origin of Governments. At any rate, the fact that Austria, in her contest with Hungary, had an intimate and faithful ally in Russia, cannot alter the real nature of the question between Austria and Hungary, nor in any way affect the neutral rights and duties of the Government of the United States or the justifiable sympathies of the American people. It is, indeed, easy to conceive that favor toward struggling Hungary would not be diminished, but increased, when it was seen that the arm of Austria was strengthened and upheld by a Power whose assistance threatened to be, and which in the end proved to be, overwhelmingly destructive of all her hopes.

Toward the conclusion of his note Mr. Hülsemann remarks that "if the Government of the United States were to think it proper to take an indirect part in the political movements of Europe, American policy would be exposed to acts of retaliation, and to certain inconveniences which would not fail to affect the commerce and industry of the two hemispheres." As to this possible contingency, this hypothetical retaliation, the Government and people of the United States are quite willing to take their chances and abide their decision. Taking neither a direct nor indirect part in the domestic or interior movements of Europe, they have no fear of events of the nature alluded to by Mr. Hülsemann.

It would be idle now to discuss with Mr. Hülsemann those acts of retaliation which he imagines may possibly take place at some indefinite time hereafter. Those questions will be discussed when they arise; and Mr. Hülsemann and the Cabinet at Vienna may rest assured that, in the meantime, while performing with strict and exact fidelity all their neutral duties, nothing will deter either the Government or the people of the United States from exercising, at their own discretion, the rights belonging to them as an independent nation, and of forming and expressing their own opinions, freely and at all times, upon the great political events which may transpire among the civilized nations of the earth.

Their own institutions stand upon the broadest principles of civil liberty; and believing these principles and the fundamental laws in which they are embodied to be eminently favorable to the prosperity of States—to be, in fact, the only principles of government which meet the demands of the present enlightened age,—the President has perceived with great satisfaction that, in the Constitution recently introduced into the Austrian Empire, many of these great principles are recognised and applied, and he cherishes a sincere wish that they may produce the same happy effect throughout his Austrian Majesty's extensive dominions that they have done in the United States.

The undersigned has the honor to repeat to Mr. Hulsemann the assurance of his high consideration.

Proposition to aid Maine in the construction of the European and North American Railway.

It will be seen on referring to our telegraphic despatch of the proceedings of Congress yesterday, that Mr. Goodenow has introduced a Bill granting a certain portion of the public lands of the United States to the State of Maine, for the purpose of aiding her in the construction of that great highway of nations, the European and North American Railway, between this city and Halifax, in Nova Scotia.

The object for which this grant is asked, is as purely National in its character as any local undertaking can be, since every State in the Union and the General Government will be greatly benefitted by its construction. It is a road in which the people of not only all parts of our own country but of the world have an interest. We trust that the Committee to whom the bill is referred, will take a large and patriotic view of the subject, and that Congress will act with all that liberality which the importance and necessities of the case imperatively demand.

☞ The Mercury, of Tuesday, contained an editorial article comparing the profits and earnings of the capital and men of New Bedford employed in the Whale Fisheries with the capital and men of the Penobscot employed in lumbering, which appears to be greatly in favor of the Whale Fisheries. The comparison involves a contrast which is very striking owing in part to the great success of those fisheries the last year. But aside from this the fact is clear enough that even in the most prosperous years for lumbering, the capital, the enterprise, the skill and industry of our people do not, from various reasons, yield so large an income as they are entitled to. There is a lack of economy in time and labor and other essentials to successful business which needs to be remedied. We are lugging off to market the rich treasures of our soil, the "monarchs of our woods," without receiving for them anything like their true value.

Among the means for economising time and labor, the Mercury will suggests the construction of a railroad to Lincoln in the following forcible manner:

"It is certain that we need better means of communication immediately and directly in the further business to lighten the burden of transportation of men and supplies,—to open up our agricultural resources,—to encourage the tilling of the soil,—to give a thousand unsuspected facilities to all sorts of trade and business that is to be carried on in the valley of the river, and in the region looking to it,—and, to sum up in a few while we work,—to remove from us the necessity of credit that hangs upon us now, as the Old Man of the Sea on the neck of Sinbad the Sailor, and to enable us to earn in the summer what we have to consume with in the winter. All these results are within the scope of less than half a million of expenditure,—and with a railroad to Lincoln, Bangor will find herself the centre of a community that supports itself, and annually sends out millions of dollars worth of its staple, and receives in return the solid cash."

The construction of this road is among the first pressing duties before the people in the Penobscot valley. They begin to understand its importance and necessity.

Beyond this, we need a diversification of labor that shall keep every man we have with us fully employed, and which shall invite into our limits thousands and tens of thousands more whose labors shall be needed. All eyes should be turned to a system which shall enable us to manufacture and grow for ourselves every article we need for consumption to which the skill of our people and the quality of our soil and climate is adapted, and beyond this to send to other parts of our own country and to the world's end, as large an amount as possible of surplus manufactures, particularly such as can be made from the raw materials upon our soil, and which we can produce. In this great system there should be no party,—no political prejudice—no old memories—but a union of wise heads and willing hands engaged in a common cause for the general welfare, prosperity and independence of all the people. Whatever of legislation, either of State or Nation, which shall be required to forward this system ought to be given. A wide range of hopeful prosperity is before us if we will but enter upon it rightly, take care of ourselves and truly husband our resources.

Mrs. Judson, widow of the late Dr. Judson, the missionary, writes home to one of her friends, under date of September, 1850, that it was the wish of her late husband that she should return to America, collect his scattered family, and assume the guardianship of his children; but she conceives that she might remain at Maulmain a few years longer without disregarding his wishes, if God should preserve her health so that she might be useful.

☞ One of the East Boston Steam Ferry Boats, which had been recently repaired at an expense of $17,000, and was every way a very costly and splendid boat, unfortunately took fire and was burned at the wharf on Sunday night last.

The oldest newspaper in New York is the Shipping and Commercial List. It was established in 1795. The oldest penny newspaper in the world is the New York Sun. It was established in 1833.

Railroading.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier.

In your paper of to-day, you have copied from the Democrat a communication in relation to the long talked of shore Railroad to Oldtown, which it seems, even now, it may require fifteen months more to complete, although it has been long since shown that it would be SURE TO PAY and could be built for $15,000 per mile. The estimate, however, did not provide for turning a short corner at the City Point, passing up to the Kenduskeag bridge, turning another corner, and crossing river in connect with the road to Waterville, in case crossing at the mouth of the stream should not be allowed. There certainly is one encouraging feature in this disposition for connection and uniformity of gauge. It shows that the writer does not consider Bangor so located, with respect to other cities, as to give rise to the fear that the travel might pass through without stopping, and that in order that a person may be compelled to stop, they should be obstructed, by a change of gauge. But that the city may continue to be the terminus of some trade, without any such contrivance I think he is right about that.

The communication appears to have been prompted by the movements of some of our citizens towards building a Railroad from Milford up river, in connexion with the existing road to Oldtown, and it intimates that it would be more wise to spend upwards of half a million of dollars, to build a road over one of the most expensive routes in the country, for the purpose of securing to Bangor the trade of the villages within ten miles of the city, than it would be to build twice the length of road above the present terminus with the same money!

It is, no doubt, of importance to Bangor and the people on the river, to have a Railroad as far up the river as means can be found to build it, to afford facilities for the existing business and to prevent the diversion of the distant trade to the St. Johns. But whether it is built upon the broad or narrow gauge, or comes from Oldtown on the direct line or crow, or the proposed circuitous one, is of but little consequence to a large majority of them; but whether it is necessary to raise $600,000, more or less, is of considerable consequence. After crossing the river at Oldtown, the ground is of a favorable character, below it is very unfavorable.

It is very important that no mistake should be made about that.

As to getting through the city if a connexion with the road west is deemed necessary, I think the company that own the existing road need no fear to submit the question to disinterested engineers, whether it could best be done from their terminus or from a road on the river.

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

Coloma.—Two weeks since we threw our knapsack over our shoulders and took a seat in the Coloma stage and sped away for the mines. At nightfall we found ourselves in the quiet valley in which Coloma is situated, where to our astonishment we saw a pleasant thriving town with its Hotels, Stores, an Exchange Office, Saw Mill, situated on either side of the American river, doing a brisk business. The town is about fifty miles from this city in a north-easterly direction, and is the seat of Justice for El Dorado county. Its population is estimated at six or eight hundred. It supplies the surrounding mining region with goods to a large amount, and is the principle depot for that purpose.

Its enterprising citizens have completed a good wagon road over the mountains to Georgetown, at an expense of near $13,000. In its vicinity we found one of the largest mining operations to be seen in California.—John M. Little and a few enterprising miners are engaged in cutting a tunnel some nine hundred feet through the solid granite, eight feet high and ten feet wide, for the purpose of draining about a mile and a half of the river. The work is nearly completed, and when the river is drained it is expected to yield a rich harvest.—[Sacramento city Tribune.

Sacramento City, Nov. 21.—The cholera has left our city and business is again the order of the day. The miners are getting their winter supplies and the streets are literally blocked up with wagons. The thousand strong and active men who have fallen within the last few weeks before the grim messenger death, are apparently forgotten and their places filled by others. There are, however, many aching hearts beneath the business externals in our streets. In California the mourners truly "go about the streets," as no time for solitude can be found.

The rain poured down in torrents night before last, preceded by violent gusts of wind, which succeeded to admiration in tearing to tatters half the canvass awning in town, and prostrating one or two buildings nearly finished. Mud and water now fill our streets, affording a foretaste of the coming rainy season.

Sacramento, Nov. 28.—Business during the past 15 days has been very brisk, and all kinds of desirable goods in fair demand. Provisions are in demand, and where good, meet with a ready sale at fair rates.

The arrival of Provisions during the fall have been amply adequate for the demand without overstocking the market. Large quantities of building materials have continued to flow in, and sales have been made at prices which would not defray expenses—shippers losing first cost and frequently more.

The arrivals of Flour have continued equal to the demand, notwithstanding the predicted scarcity. Heavy clothing and long thick boots are now needed, as the rainy season has probably fairly set in. The supply is at present rather slim, although large invoices are on their way and daily looked for.

The Money market continues easy among the business community, but no sales of consequence have been effected in real estate—there appearing to be no disposition to purchase, while holders are looking forward to the spring and summer for more activity. Forced sales are made at very heavy sacrifices. Business during the rainy season must be dull, as was the case during the past winter. Many merchants are closing out, with the intention of re-opening in the spring anticipating a heavy business.

Emigration or Convicts. Our prisons and station houses are full of convicts, mostly from the penal colonies of the Pacific. Our police monthly show that these people are the great leprosy that is rendering the whole surface of society hateful and disgusting. Van Dieman's Land, and New South Wales have been the lazarettos whence moral pestilence and contagion have spread to us in forms more terrible and ruinous to society and the soul, than cholera and yellow fever and small pox united, can be to the body. It is not gem and felt alone in the crimes committed immediately by this leprous gang of incarnate fiends. Each of them strikes the blow with one hand—wields one knife or pulls one trigger.

The power to regulate this matter probably lies alone in the General Government. Congress should be petitioned, and nothing left undone that can have a tendency to abate so much of the evil as already exists among us, and also to prevent all further extension from a similar cause. [Alta California.

The California Press. In the newspaper line we are not wanting in numbers. Three in Sacramento, and one Whig organ additional expected. In Stockton two; in Sonora one; in Marysville one; in San Francisco six dailies, one semi-monthly, and another daily, advertised to appear on the 5th inst. In Monterey only in fact, one Whig paper, and two more threatened in San Diego—20 in all.

THE MANLY SEAL THOUGHTS SUGGESTED BY THE LORD'S PRAYER. By FRANCIS WAYLAND, D. D. New York: M. W. Dodd. 1850.

We have here a handsome volume, from the pen of one of the most influential ministers of our country, and upon one of the most interesting of subjects, since it relates to man's whole being, and is related to two worlds—the natural, and the spiritual world.

There is doubtless much more with the Lord's Prayer even in those who believe only in the letter of the Word, than is generally present in the mind and fully appreciated, even when the prayer is repeated, while to others there are spiritual fulness and comprehensiveness in the prayer adopted to all of man's spiritual wants. It cannot but be, then, that many striking and valuable thoughts should be suggested by this prayer to the mind of the learned and devout author of this work.

His subject is arranged into sixteen different chapters.

It is not our purpose to review this work, nor, even if we were disposed to do so is this the appropriate place. A much humbler object we have, and that is, merely to call attention to the book itself, and we do this the more cheerfully as we find in it much that is suggestive, and which we deem well designed to bring the mind to dwell more upon the excellencies and comprehensiveness of this divine prayer. The work is worthily printed in a style which will suit the aged and tempt all. It is for sale at the bookstore of Messrs. E. F. Duren & Co.

The U. S. Frigate St. Lawrence has finally been selected as the National vessel for transporting articles to the World's Fair at London.

Bangor, Jan. 9, 1851.

☞ We have heard the remark more than once that Gay Farrington's Oyster Saloon is ahead of the times for an abundance of Oysters as well as excellency of flavor. His liberal distribution in this respect is setting for him an illustrious example to others. Call the fragrance continual by thronging the magnificent saloon, East end Kenduskeag Bridge.

Foster's Mountain Compound, for the Hair, far surpasses any other Compound for the Ladies' Toilet. It operates equally as well in Winter as in Summer. One bottle of it is worth more than its weight in California Gold. Its high reputation, both from distinguished individuals and the press generally, has established its reputation as the only sure remedy for all diseases of the Scalp. Baldness and falling of the hair, resulting from Dyspepsia, Fevers, Humors, &c., are brought forth luxuriously by its use. Its nauseous, sickening properties of Alcohol, which render it and nearly all other articles offered to the public, so offensive to the refined taste, are entirely removed by the use of this Compound, and in their stead are substituted the most delightful perfumes, rendering it the most delicate and agreeable article ever offered to the public. Be sure and call for Foster's Mountain Compound, and take no other. Sold by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the country.

The Mountain Compound is equally adapted to the elite and fashionable in all the principal cities of the Union, and is highly recommended as a suitable article for giving great beauty, luxuriance and richness to the texture of the hair, ever invented.

Ladies and Gentlemen, try it! We say try it!!

Sold by LADD & INGRAHAM, 93 A. P. GUILD, and Druggists every where.

☞ H. W. FOSTER'S written signature upon every bottle of genuine.

☞ More than one hundred persons of the first respectability, and among them one of the first medical practitioners in this country, have certified to facts from their own experience and knowledge which prove beyond a doubt, that for cases of General Debility, and indigestion, giving the quick Headache, Pains in various parts of the body, and other Nervous disturbances, which baffle the skill of the most eminent physicians, a dash of consumption and other dreadful diseases—there is no remedy so speedily indicated as HOLDEN'S ALTERATIVE AND TONIC MIXTURE.

New Orleans, Dec. 28th.

Arrived—Maria Crocker, Rockland, 25, brigs Tehuantepec, Kennebunk; Reville, Rockland

St. Louis, Jan. 6.

Accounts from the Mexican Boundary Commission are received, dated El Paso, Nov. 24. Mr. Bartlett arrived at El Paso on the 19th Nov., in advance of the main body, in 33 days from San Antonio, after a detention of seven days to recruit the animals, and ten days of severe snow storm, having agreed to meet the Mexican Commissioner on the 1st of November. In consequence of the detention of the Commissioner, he was induced to take a party of young engineers as an escort, well mounted and armed, together with spies and hunters (Mexicans their only guides). At the Cobre, he was visited by one of the principal chiefs of Lipan Indians, accompanied by warriors. The interview was friendly, but great caution taken to show that the party was well armed. At Salt Lake, west side of Guadalupe Pass, they found a train of wagons belonging to Mr. Gowen with government stores, which left San Antonio in June and had been detained 50 days for want of water.

Mr Bartlett reached El Paso in forty days from this place.

Ohio Legislature.—Columbus, Jan. 7th.

The Missouri Legislature is to go into the election of Senator, in place of Mr. Benton, on Thursday next. Mr. H. S. Geyer is the Whig candidate.

Mann's Writing Ink.

THERE is no estate so in its excellencies, as the following is the testimony of the Bangor Democrat:—

This Ink is manufactured by Dr. Wm. Mann, of this city. We have used it for the last eight or nine years, and can assure the public that it is an excellent article. It is a jet black, flows freely from the pen, and retains its color in our account books, after the lapse of years, as fresh as when first written. The proprietor has made it for no exertion to be the best in the city, which it is, and is used extensively, not only in this vicinity, but in Boston and other places. He offers it cheap at his Drug Store, No. 37 West Market Square.

THE GENUINE BALM OF COLUMBIA.

IF you wish a rich luxuriant head of hair free from dandruff and scurf you need look no further than the genuine Balm of Columbia In cases of fever it is of more than ordinary expectations Many who have lost their hair for twenty years have had it restored to its original growth by the use of the Balm Age, style or condition appears to make no difference with it for it promotes a healthful flow with the ordinary hair lustre and beauty which renders it so much admired (when genuine) by the ladies of fashion. Many bald heads have had their hair restored from a state of nudity to a full head of luxuriant growth in a very few months. In the west of fevers it will be found the most pleasant wash that can be used. A few applications only are necessary to keep the hair from falling out. It is cooling to the head, prevents dandruff, and imparts a rich glossy appearance, and as a dressing for the hair in undress or full dress it is unrivalled. Ladies and gentlemen who have used other articles for the hair restorative will find this a more effectual
